WHY CHILDREN ARE LAZY

By: Bill 10-D

Children have grown lazy, loving to live luxuriously without the need to work to survive. They have grown to disrespect their elders as well. So much has changed since the olden times with hardworking teenagers. Nowadays, teenagers always think themselves better than their elders.

The change occurred when the world civilized, with business budding everywhere and money plentiful. However, civilized kids now depend on their parents for food, water, clothing, and shelter.

My Dearest 8B's,

The very first day of school when I saw all your faces, mixed emotions overwhelmed me. For the four months that we've been together, I have realized all the things that we've been through. You have understood me better and so have I.

My LOVE for you my beloved students, is getting stronger because we all share problems and joys in and outside the school. We always trust each other with matters that concern us.

The school year has just begun; many things will still happen, but all of these trials will be solved if we all are open and willing to accept suggestions, criticisms and recommendations.

8B's, let us all remember that we are all given the chance to do what is right for everyone, but the choice is yours not mine. Just remember, we must be ready to face whatever consequences occur in the future.

Words are not enough to let you know that I am so thankful to have you in my class; you always inspire me to come to school and impart my lessons everyday.

Take care always, GUY'S. Thank you for your SMILES and TRUST.

LOVE,

Mr. Domir Bascon Borres

No longer do teenagers work with their parents to earn a living. Therefore, they don't appreciate their parents and continue to disrespect them, and the dwindling need to work makes them lazy! Parents also spoil their children, providing all the necessities for life, as well as, luxuries! Children then expect parents to do their will.

The modern society provides a better chance for teenagers to enjoy independence, but it also increases the chance to ruin a kid's life. If teenagers could see how parents and offspring once worked together, side by side, just earn their daily bread, they might appreciate everything they have now.
